This information pertains to one of the Training and Dialogue Programs of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), which shall be implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between both Governments.
I. Concept

Background
As one of the solutions for environmental problems, effective use of natural energy has become a common global issue together with the promotion of renewable energy use. In addition, the importance of energy diversity is increasing due to energy security issues.

Among renewable energy resources, photovoltaic (PV) is expected to be a promising growth industry for a future low carbon society, and its demand is expanding as performance improves due to recent technological development. A photovoltaic system mainly consists of photovoltaic modules and a power conditioner for an interconnected system, and photovoltaic modules, storage batteries and a battery charging controller for individual installation systems (Solar Home Systems). The PV systems convert solar light energy to electric energy. Since the technology is relatively simple to handle, it is expected that PV would be widely utilized for electrifying rural households and public facilities such as clinics in developing countries. However, inadequate installation and maintenance have become problems at many sites, and reinforcement of technological guidance by the government and related institutions is expected.

In terms of energy resources, Japan depends heavily on imports, and the nation has been making efforts to develop alternative energy. Japan started technological development of renewable energy more than a quarter century ago, and it has now become one of world leaders in the field of renewable energy including PV, which has been materialized through close collaborations among the industry, Japanese government and academia.

This program is designed to provide participants with an opportunity to investigate the Japanese experience of PV industry. In cooperation with Kansai Economic Federation, a Japanese business association, participants will have many opportunities to visit Japanese companies and exchange information. At the end of the training, participants are expected to gain understanding, and strategic viewpoint and way of thinking for sustainable promotion of PV industry in their respective countries through the training in Japan.

For what?
This program aims at providing participants with the opportunities to understand the necessary policy, and economic and technical conditions for introducing and disseminating PV technologies, and the method of project planning for PV promotion in their respective countries.

For whom?
This program is offered to officials working in governmental or implementing organizations for energy, especially for PV development.

How?
At the beginning of the program, participants are requested to present their country reports covering the situations of energy demand and supply including electric power and renewable energy, and PV development and dissemination, which participants are required to prepare in their countries in advance. (Please refer to VI. ANNEX I and II Country Report Presentation Format and Energy Situation Matrix for the detailed contents) In Japan, participants will have the opportunities to visit PV manufacturers and other PV related companies, attend lectures, involve themselves in discussions, and make presentations of their preliminary plans for developing and promoting PV technologies in their respective countries.

This course will be conducted under cooperation with Kansai Economic Federation, a Japanese business association in western Japan. Information exchange and discussion with participants will help the Japanese companies to further extend their business activities overseas.

V. Other Information

1. DEVELOPMENT EDUCATION PROGRAMME:
The purposes of the International Cooperation Program of JICA are not only to share Japanese knowledge, experience and ideas with participating countries, but also to promote mutual understanding between participating countries and Japan. The Japanese government recognizes the importance of citizen participation in its International Cooperation Program and has thus recently placed a greater emphasis on this aspect of the Program. With this objective, JICA collaborates with schools and local governments as well as various kinds of community-based organizations to expose the members to the rich heritages of foreign cultures represented by participants, as a precious first step to promote international exchange and cooperation. To provide a stronger foundation for these activities, JICA has been conducting a Development Education Program for Japanese citizens in all training courses and seminars it offers. Participants are encouraged to bring any materials necessary to introduce the cultural heritages and/or natural histories of their own countries, such as national costumes, musical instruments, works of art, photographs, and so on. This program is scheduled to start on the first Thursday following the participants’ arrival in Japan.

JICA and Capacity Development

The key concept underpinning JICA operations since its establishment in 1974 has been the conviction that “capacity development” is central to the socioeconomic development of any country, regardless of the specific operational scheme one may be undertaking, i.e. expert assignments, development projects, development study projects, training programs, JOCCV programs, etc.

Within this wide range of programs, Training Programs have long occupied an important place in JICA operations. Conducted in Japan, they provide partner countries with opportunities to acquire practical knowledge accumulated in Japanese society. Participants dispatched by partner countries might find useful knowledge and re-create their own knowledge for enhancement of their own capacity or that of the organization and society to which they belong.

About 460 pre-organized programs cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs and are being customized to address the specific needs of different target organizations, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan was the first non-Western country to successfully modernize its society and industrialize its economy. At the core of this process, which started more than 140 years ago, was the “adopt and adapt” concept by which a wide range of appropriate skills and knowledge have been imported from developed countries; these skills and knowledge have been adapted and/or improved using local skills, knowledge and initiatives. They finally became internalized in Japanese society to suit its local needs and conditions.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated from this “adoption and adaptation” process, which, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories. We presume that such experiences, both successful and unsuccessful, will be useful to our partners who are trying to address the challenges currently faced by developing countries.

However, it is rather challenging to share with our partners this whole body of Japan’s developmental experience. This difficulty has to do, in part, with the challenge of explaining a body of “tacit knowledge,” a type of knowledge that cannot fully be expressed in words or numbers. Adding to this difficulty are the social and cultural systems of Japan that vastly differ from those of other Western industrialized countries, and hence still remain unfamiliar to many partner countries. Simply stated, coming to Japan might be one way of overcoming such a cultural gap.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.
